Filmmakers (and brothers-in-law) Stu Stone and Adam Rodness have done the documentary format (Netflix's Jack of All Trades) and are no strangers to horror (Scarecrows, The Haunted House on Kirby Road). Their newest film - Faking a Murderer - is a clever, crazed combination of the two genres, creating a unique, unreal true crime

1. Eliminate all contact with people from your old life. Unfortunately, most people who've faked their own deaths screw up this part of the process by cashing in on the insurance check they hoped to get, or getting a speeding ticket. If you want to get away with it, you've got to disappear completely.
